INVESTOR CONFIDENCE INDEX RISES TO 97.2 IN JUNE

Boston, June 19, 2007 – State Street Global Markets, the investment research and trading arm of State Street Corporation (NYSE:STT), today released the results of the State Street Investor Confidence Index[®] for June 2007.

Global Investor Confidence rose by 5.1 points to 97.2 from May's revised reading of 92.1. Leading the way were North American institutional investors, whose confidence rose from 100.1 to 105.8. The gain in European investor confidence from 94.4 to 94.9 was more modest, while Asian sentiment dipped from 85.8 to 83.8.

Developed through State Street Global Markets' research partnership, State Street Associates, by Harvard University professor Ken Froot and State Street Associates Director Paul O'Connell, the State Street Investor Confidence Index[®] measures investor confidence on a quantitative basis by analyzing the actual buying and selling patterns of institutional investors. The index is based on financial theory that assigns precise meaning to changes in investor risk appetite, or the willingness of investors to allocate their portfolios to equities. The more of their portfolio that institutional investors are willing to devote to equities, the greater their risk appetite or confidence.

"Globally, institutional investors are continuing to display an inclination to allocate towards risky assets, leading Investor Confidence to nudge back towards 100 for the second time this year," commented Froot. "Growth prospects reflected in the bearish bond market are part of the story, but even controlling for these fundamentals the appetite to take risk remains strong.”

“Looking regionally, it is North American institutional investors who are displaying the most enthusiasm,” added O’Connell. “European investors have followed suit to some degree, but Asian institutions have been reluctant to deploy risk, and confidence there remains more or less at the same level as at the start of the year.”
